Two thousand years ago, London was a small village by *the River Thames. Then *the Romans came and built a town, and thousands of people lived there. Now, in the twenty-first century, London is the biggest city in Britain, with more than seven million people. It is the capital city of the United Kingdom, the home of Queen Elizabeth the Second, and the home of the British government. Millions of visitors come to London every year.

The name 'London' comes from the Romans. People lived ①(A)here before the Romans came, but we do not know very much about ①(B)them. The Romans came to England in the year 43. Their ships came up the River Thames from the sea, and they built houses and other buildings next to the river. They built a bridge over the river, and they called the town Londinium. You can find out about London's early days, and about the Romans, at the Museum of London.

It was a rich town, and about 50,000 people lived in it. But soon after the year 400, the Romans left Londinium and went back to Rome, and for three hundred years London was a (②) place. Then people began to live in the town again, and it was soon rich and important. People called Angles, Saxons, and Jutes came to Britain from Germany, Holland, and Denmark. Then, in the ninth and tenth centuries, Danish ships came up the River Thames and destroyed many of Londinium's buildings.

In 1066, England had a new king – *William the Conqueror from France. William came to live in London and built a castle there (today we know it as the Tower of London). London was then the biggest and most important city in England, and it got bigger and bigger. In 1509, when Henry the Eighth was king, there were 50,000 people in London. In 1600, when Henry's daughter Elizabeth the First was queen, there were 200,000 people.

The *plague often came to London, but ③1665 was the worst year of all. In the hot summer that year thousands of people were ill, and 100,000 of them died. 1665 was called the Year of the Great Plague. Then a year later, in 1666, there was a big fire — ④the Great Fire of London. It began in a house in Pudding Lane, near London Bridge. Most houses were built of wood at that time, and fires love wood. The Great Fire of London went through street after street after street, and it did not stop for four days.

More than a quarter of a million people lost their homes in the fire. It destroyed St Paul's Cathedral and eighty-eight other churches. But it also destroyed most of the worst old buildings. A new St Paul's Cathedral was built between 1675 and 1711.

In the eighteenth century, Britain was one of the most important countries in the world, and London was its most important city. Some Londoners were very (⑤), and they built some of the most beautiful houses in the city. Many of those houses are standing today. But at the same time, other people lived in cold, dark, wet houses.

Ⅲ. Taroと Mike が話をしています。対話文を読み、各設問に答えなさい。(*の語には注釈がある。)

On the train platform:

Taro: It's so hot and dirty down here. It smells bad!

Mike: Yes, it does. So I don't like to ride the train here during the summer.

Taro: It's so different from the train stations in Tokyo. The stations there are not dirty, and the subways have air conditioning. Sometimes it's too cold!

Mike: Wow – sounds nice! I hope our subways will be cleaner someday.

Taro: I hope so, too! By the way, what time is the train coming?

Mike: I'm not sure.

Taro: You can't check your *phone app?

Mike: What do you mean?

Taro: In Japan, there is an app to help you look up your train route and the train times.

Mike: I've never heard of an app like that. In America there isn't an app for train times.

Taro: OK. Well, can we check the schedule somewhere?

Mike: We can look for a schedule here on the train platform, but it won't help.

Taro: What do you mean? Why not?

Mike: Because the trains almost never come on time.

Taro: Wow!

Mike: Why are you so surprised?

Taro: In Japan, especially in Tokyo, it's the opposite. Trains are almost always on time.

Mike: That's amazing!

Taro: Yes. A . Well, as for our train, what should we do?

Mike: Now, we just wait. It won't be too long. The trains come often during the day.

Taro: I'm glad.

Mike: At night, though, it's very different.

Taro: What do you mean?

Mike: Well, late at night you never know when a train is coming. Sometimes you have to wait an hour!

Taro: That sounds bad. What time do the trains stop running at night?

Mike: They don't stop. The trains here run 24 hours a day, every day.

Taro: Oh! That's different from Tokyo, too.

Mike: Do you mean the trains stop running every night in Tokyo?

Taro: Yes. In Tokyo, most trains stop running around midnight or 1:00am. Then they start running again around 4:30 or 5:00am.

Mike: What do people do if they miss the last train?

Taro: They sometimes find some places to sleep.

Mike: Oh!

Taro: By the way, where should we line up?

Mike: Sorry?

Taro: Where do we line up to get on the train?

Mike: People here don't line up.

Taro: How do you know where the train doors are?

Mike: We don't! We just wait, and when the train comes, we move to the closest door.

Taro: That's so interesting. We wait in line before the train comes in Japan.

Mike: I see. Oh, look! The train is coming! I hope we can get seats!
